BioHPP

The Next Evolution In Dental Technology

BioHPP is a PEEK-based ceramic reinforced high performance polymer used as a framework material in a range of applications.

BioHPP has shock-absorbing “off-peak” characteristics that lower and delay the onset of occlusal forces, protecting both the dental prostheses and underlying biological structures from the damaging effects of bite forces.

Available in pellets and ingots for the pressing technique or CAD-CAM discs for milling, BioHPP is versatile and integrates easily into existing lab workflows. BioHPP can be veneered with a range of materials including lithium-disilicate ceramics, composites, and visio.lign.
